List of Figures.....	ii
Preface	v
Acknowledgements	v
Introduction.....	1
Part 1 Material culture
Chapter 1: The examined material culture	11
1.0 Introduction: the investigated material culture	11
Chapter 2: Presentation and Interpretation of the Examined Material Culture	25
1.2.0 Symbol or costume-fitting; magnificent decorated ornaments within the socio-cultural discussion	25
1.2.1 Neck collars within the Nordic Bronze Age	29
1.2.2 Belt plates and belt discs in the Nordic Bronze Age	36
1.2.3 A short presentation of tutuli within the Nordic Bronze Age.....	45
1.2.4 Highly decorated bronze pins in northern Germany and Scandinavia during the Early and Middle Bronze Age.....	49
Chapter 3: Archaeological residues of metalcraft within the Nordic Bronze Age	56
1.3.0 Introducing the archaeological evidence of metalcraft.....	56
1.3.1 Settlements.....	56
1.3.2. Hoards.....	60
1.3.3 Burials.....	63
1.3.4 The metalworker in the archaeological record	64
Part 2 Archaeological and Scientific Investigation
Chapter 1: Bronze Age Metalwork of NBA II/III in Northern Europe	66
2.1.0 Introduction and method of the technical and investigative parts of the study.....	66
2.1.1 Differences in Nordic metalwork	67
Chapter 2: Bronze Age craftsmanship: a research history.....	71
2.2.0 Research concerning Bronze Age metalcraft.....	71
2.2.1 Research concerning the crafting of ‘Nordic’ ornaments.....	72
2.2.2 Drescher’s experiments in the light of modern research	74
2.2.3 Methods for the preparation of individual decorative elements	76
Chapter 3: Experimental and ethnological research.....	82
2.3.0 Experimental research and its significance for the knowledge of prehistoric metalcraft	82
2.3.1 Experiments based on ethnographic parallels	84
2.3.2 Embossing – an ‘exclusion experiment’: NBA III ornaments embossed on a copper sheet	85
Chapter 4: The Difference within metalworking techniques	89
2.4.0 Traces of crafting and comparing techniques	89
2.4.1 The methodology.....	89
2.4.2 A trace-catalogue for the technical examination of the bronze ornaments	90
Chapter 5: Casting techniques and casting moulds.....	96
2.5.0 Casting techniques used to craft ornaments of the Nordic Bronze Age.....	96
2.5.1 Lost-form casting.....	98
2.5.2 The cast-on technique (‘Überfangguss’)	114
2.5.3 Casting in open moulds (‘Herdguss’): the Lüneburg-type wheel-headed pin	126
2.5.4 Casting in two-part moulds made of ceramic, metal, stone: the wheel-headed pins.....	127
2.5.5 Concluding thoughts concerning casting techniques used in the Nordic Bronze Age	132

Chapter 6: Crafting traces and crafting sequences	138
2.6.0 The ornament in focus – methods of craft-technical studies.....	138
2.6.1 Encrypted in the decoration: operational sequences	139
2.6.2 Legacies of the Bronze Age smith: mistakes in manufacture as indicators for the ‘craftsperson’.....	145
2.6.3 Specialised techniques to create decorative units	159
2.6.4 Traces of individual and unique techniques	172
2.6.5 as reaction to mistakes in crafting and their potential for tracing individual behaviour	176
2.6.6 Tool traces and the use of identical tools.....	185
2.6.7 Ornaments in pairs: an indicator for similarity.....	192
Chapter 7: Archaeometallurgical investigations.....	197
2.7.0 A natural scientific method with immense potential for the investigation of prehistoric crafts.....	197
2.7.1 Method and documentation	198
2.7.2 Microstructures in metals: the basics	202
2.7.3 Microstructures in metals: revealing the potential for reconstructing operational sequences	203
2.7.4 Corrosion.....	206
2.7.5 Cast and hammered: the microstructures of NBA II and III ornaments	209
Chapter 8: It starts with the model – results of the craft-technical investigation	218
2.8.0 Chronological and spatial distribution pattern	218
2.8.1. Crafting neck collars	220
2.8.2 Crafting belt plates and belt discs.....	226
2.8.3 Crafting tutuli (belt humps)	235
2.8.4 Crafting Nordic Bronze Age pins (wheel- and disc-headed pins).....	240
 Part 3 Metalcraft in a theoretical light
Chapter 1: Theoretical approaches to craft in prehistoric times: a research History.....	247
3.1.0 Craft theory, some introductory thoughts.....	247
3.1.1 Theoretical approaches to the study of technology	248
3.1.2 Individual agency in technology.....	249
3.1.3 Apprenticeship in archaeology	251
3.1.4 Style and technology.....	254
Chapter 2: The craftsperson’s habitus	256
3.2.0 The explanation of ‘inexplicable action’.....	256
3.2.1 Body of knowledge and ‘tacit knowledge’	257
3.2.2 Learned and adopted technical behaviour	260
3.2.3 The influence of social environment on craft and crafting.....	262
Chapter 3: Technological choices	267
3.3.0 Choices within operational sequences.....	267
3.3.1 Free technical choices – a characteristic for art?.....	269
Chapter 4: Apprenticeship and Bronze Age craft.....	271
3.4.0 Craft training and apprenticeship – a multidisciplinary research field	271
3.4.1 Traces of apprenticeship within the material of the Nordic Bronze Age	273
3.4.2 Innovative individuals – the creation of style	283
Chapter 5: A new approach to the study of craft in prehistoric times	286
3.5.0 Operational sequences: a basic tool and even more	286
3.5.1 Asking ‘how’, ‘where’ and ‘whom’ – specific questions and information on several levels.....	286
3.5.2 Asking about technological traditions and workshop areas: the second information level.....	288
3.5.3 Asking for innovative actions and individual behaviour: the third information level.....	288
3.5.4 Asking for the organisation of craft: the fourth information level.....	290
 Part 4 Metalwork within the Nordic Bronze Age: Conclusion and Discussion
Chapter 1: Pattern of regional behaviour	298
4.1.0 Tracing regional behaviour in the metalwork of the Nordic Bronze Age.....	298
4.1.1 Decorative-element distribution	299

4.1.2 Regionally restricted technical behaviour	304
4.1.3 Decorative and technical similarities – regional technological behaviour or workshop circles?	306
Chapter 2: Traces of individual behaviour	310
4.2.0 An approach to measure skill and productivity	310
4.2.1 The Bronze Age smith: traces of individuality.....	316
Chapter 3: Traces of interaction groups of craftspeople – Traces of the analytical workshop	337
4.3.0 A workshop’s repertoire? An examination of hoard assemblages	337
4.3.1 Workshops, craftspeople and their contacts	344
Chapter 4: The organisation of craft in the Nordic Bronze Age.....	361
4.4.0 About imports, imitation, mobility, and the organisation of craft	361
4.4.1 Metalcraft: more complex than previously thought?	362
4.4.2 The question of mobility: itinerant craftspeople in a new light	366
Bibliography	370
Catalogue.....	390
Introduction to the Catalogue	390
Alphabetical Catalogue	392
Table 1: Morphological data	481
Table 2: Skill and production units	488
Table 3: Metal analysis.....	497
